Littleworth is a two part dwelling located on Ross Neck and the shores of Hudson Creek. The tall part is one and one-half storys and, like many of the dwellings on the Neck, has two windows flanking the central door with two dormers above. A small 20th century chimney pierces the apex of the roof at both ends. The wing is also one and one-half storys and is composed of two nearly equal sections with part having a recessed screened porch on the part nearest the main part and the other part having two windows. There are three dormers on the roof.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

Littleworth has been altered in the twentieth century and in order to determine its original appearance it would be necessary to examine the interior. As it now stands it bears some resemblance to Corner's Wharf, though the latter is considerably longer. The dormers have console-like on their lower extremities which is a feature frequently encountered in the area.
